PSALM 26

CALL TO WORSHIP

L: Today Christians all over the world celebrate Communion. All who believe in God and in Jesus His Son share in the same Communion as one family in Christ.

P: Praise God, from Whom all blessings are given to us, not because we are deserving of them, but because God is a merciful, loving, and generous God.

L: God loves His children, man and woman, parent and child, young and old, of every race and nation on this earth. Indeed, it is God’s will that all should be united in one church family. Yet we seek out differences and find them in incidentals. We then elevate these incidentals to details of supreme importance and use them to divide ourselves into groups in order to raise ourselves above those in other groups.

P: It is true. We seek to separate ourselves by the color of our skin, the amount of wealth we have, the jobs we do, and a hundred other things which are irrelevant to how God sees us and how we should see each other, as God’s beloved children.

L: On this World Communion Sunday, can we forget our differences and focus on our similarities? Can we look at each other with love in our hearts for ALL God’s children?

P: O God, please help us to see each other, here and everywhere, as You see all of Your children, as Your beloved family. Remind us that we are commissioned to spread Your Good News everywhere, and that how we treat others is the strongest way to demonstrate Your Good News, offered for all.
